Read the following, then answer the questions:

كتاب التقييمات

Amina doesn't like math. She used to think she had to study computer science because everyone says it's excellent. But she felt stressed every time she saw numbers. One day, her cousin showed her a graphic design on a tablet. Amina drew it and made it move. She smiled for the first time in weeks. She learned that computer science is about numbers, but graphic design is about colors and ideas. She didn't know you could make art with computers. Her motivation is creativity – not money. She says, "I don't work for money. I work because I feel free." She doesn't want to be an engineer. She wants to design games for kids.

Listening text

Gen Alpha are children born from 2010 onwards. They are called digital natives because they grow up in a digital environment. For them, smartphones, tablets, social media, and even artificial intelligence is normal. Many of them learn to use apps before they can read. Their daily life is highly connected to technology and full of digital experiences. They share memes, use emojis to express feelings, and make short videos to show hobbies or opinions.
